

CALL BASES SUMMARY

The Director of Studies at the MNCARS will be responsible for overseeing the areas of Studies, Paracademia, Independent Studies Program, Film and New Media, Networked-Museum, and Research. This Director also will assume the coordination of various programs of the museum which compose "Reina Sofía Museum Campus," the liaison with Universities and their Masters and Postgraduate programs, the conception and direction of different institutes and study programs (decolonial, critical art history, cultural studies, art of uncertain epochs, etc.), and the promotion and supervision of artistic research residencies and grants for these programs. Finally, the person in this position will contribute to the expansion and promotion of research in Spanish modern and contemporary art and will be responsible for designing formats for international thought exchange. In this sense, it is a position of trust that will be in close contact with the Director. The salary for the position amounts to €79,650.00 gross per year.

Applicants must be Spanish nationals, nationals of an EU member state, or have a work permit or similar in Spain, as well as hold an official university degree in a field related to the museum's mission (Art History, Fine Arts, or other branches of Humanities or related disciplines), with a minimum of 8 years of demonstrable professional experience in areas related to academia or university education, cultural institutions, social sciences and humanities, fine arts, or art history (particular consideration will be given to performance in high-responsibility positions dedicated to teaching and research). Experience in organizing seminars, colloquiums, research projects, and managing academic programs is important, as well as experience in managing cooperation and scientific collaboration agreements with other museums, cultural institutions, universities, and research centers. Additionally, publications on museography and contemporary art will be considered, along with public communication skills, an international contact agenda, availability for travel, work and leadership skills, and proficiency in English and Spanish. A personal interview will be carried out to evaluate the candidacy in those cases in which it is considered necessary to verify the suitability of the profile required for the position.

Applicants are required to submit a CV, a letter of motivation, a management skills self-assessment questionnaire (annex II) and a sworn declaration stating that they are not disqualified from holding a public office (annex III). The process will be conducted online through the digital office of the Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofía (<https://museoreinasofia.sede.gob.es/>). The registration period will begin on June 2 at 00:00 and will end on June 11, 2024 at 11:59 p.m.

All participants in the selection process agree to guarantee absolute confidentiality, with the only exceptions established in this call to guarantee the publicity and competition required by law. Only the name of the selected person will be made public.
